Today, Tryzub Kitchen carries on these rich traditions, offering a diverse selection of beverages, including kvas, nastoyanka (infused spirits), Ukrainian tea selection, kompot, uzvar, wane, beer, and crafted cocktails, celebrating centuries of Ukrainian drink-making heritage.

By the 17th century, beer brewing had expanded beyond Lviv to smaller towns like Zhytomyr and Sumy, each developing distinctive local brews. In the Carpathian Mountains, Hutsul communities perfected herbal teas made from wild plants, while regions like Vynnytsia and Ternopil became known for medivka (fermented honey drinks).

The 19th century saw the rise of kompot, with variations across Poltava, and Khmelnytskyi focusing on berries, while Zaporizhzhia and Cherkasy added herbs for richer flavors. By the 20th century, horilka became a staple across Ukraine, with Kharkiv adding honey and peppers, while Sivershchyna villages continued crafting spiced drinks like spotykach and varenyukha.
